These forward-looking statements are based on numerous assumptions regarding our present and future business strategies and the environment in which we will operate in the future. Important factors that could cause our actual performance or achievements to differ materially from those in the forward-looking statements include, among other things, the following: (i) our ability to successfully implement our business plans and strategies and achieve our stated objectives and goals; (ii) future developments, trends and conditions in the industry and markets in which we operate or into which we intend to expand, including changes in the competitive environment; (iii) general political and economic conditions of jurisdictions in which we operate; (iv) our business operations and prospects and our future business development, financial condition and results of operations; (v) our capital expenditure plans and sources of funding; (vi) weather, natural disasters and climate change; (vii) the actions and developments of our competitors; (viii) our financial condition and performance and margins; (ix) capital market developments and exchange rate fluctuations; (x) our dividend policy; (xi) any changes in the laws, rules and regulations of the central and local governments in the PRC and other relevant jurisdictions and the rules, regulations and policies of the relevant governmental authorities relating to all aspects of our business and business plans, and our ability to remain in compliance with applicable laws and regulations; (xii) our ability to develop new products or services, enhance existing offerings and bring them to market in a timely manner; (xiii) our ability to maintain, protect and enhance our intellectual property and proprietary rights; and (xiv) various business opportunities that we may pursue and all other risks and uncertainties described in “Risk Factors.”
