17. FAIR VALUE AND FAIR VALUE HIERARCHY

As at 30 June 2014 and 31 December 2013, other than the available-for-sale investment, of which the range of reasonable fair value estimates is so significant that the directors are of the opinion that their fair value cannot be measured reliably, the carrying amounts of the Group's financial instruments approximate to their fair values largely due to the short term maturities of these instruments.

The fair values of the financial assets and financial liabilities are included at the amount at which the instrument could be exchanged in a current transaction between willing parties, other than in a forced or liquidation sale.

The following tables illustrate the fair value measurement hierarchy of the Group's financial instruments:

The Group will endeavour to explore and develop overseas markets through strategic business collaborations with suitable partners and customers.

Following the PRC government and related agencies’ increase in investment in power transmission and distribution projects, there will be major development in the power transmission sector in the PRC, especially ultra-high voltage direct current transmission projects and flexible direct current power transmission projects. According to the National Energy Administration’s approved plan for constructing trans-regional ultra-high voltage power transmission lines, five new ultra-high voltage power transmission lines will be constructed by the end of 2017 to solve the uneven distribution of power and combat the increasingly serious environmental pollution issues. Meanwhile, with the Group’s power capacitor products continuously succeeded in winning the bids in State Grid Corporation of China and increase in promotion of flexible direct current power transmission techniques, the Group is confident in the development opportunities within the power transmission sector.

During the second half of the fiscal year, it is expected that the Group's business will benefit from the PRC government's implementation of the power transmission and distribution, railways and other fixed assets related investment plans. The Group expects the market will be better than the first half of the fiscal year.
