Under the impact of current unfavorable factors such as volatile international environment and China's strict epidemic prevention measures, the global smartphone shipment volume recorded a decline in the first quarter of 2022. The production and sales process of certain products of the Group have also been affected. However, the Group actively conducted strategic deployment in recent years and diversified its business focus to non-handset related businesses, which brought new growth drivers to the Group and offset part of the decline in the Group's overall sales caused by handset related business.

The global smartphone market will still be affected by external uncertainties in the short term, posing challenges to the Group's operations. However, by continuously improving its own operational efficiency and dispersing its deployment in non-handset related high-growth industries such as virtual reality/augmented reality ("AR/VR") products, household and sports goods and electric vehicles, the Group can promote the continuous growth of the Group's business in the long run, and improve the Group's gross profit and profit by optimizing the Group's product portfolio.

The Board hereby reminds shareholders and potential investors that the above information were prepared based on the unaudited consolidated management accounts of the Group which have neither been reviewed nor audited by the auditors of the Company. The operational information for the Period may not reflect the overall performance of the Group for a complete reporting period.

Shareholders and potential investors of the Company are advised not to place undue reliance on the aforesaid information and they are advised to exercise caution in dealing in the securities of the Company.
