China's economy has withstood pressure and forged ahead despite difficulties, while maintained a steady progress on the whole. According to the Guiding Opinions on Energy Work in 2025 (《2025年能源工作指導意見》) issued by the National Energy Administration, China's coal production will maintain stable growth; natural gas output will continue to grow rapidly; new installed capacity of renewable energy generation will exceed 200 million kilowatts; inter-provincial and inter-regional power transmission capacity will continue to increase; the proportion of non-fossil energy in total installed capacity of power generation will increase to about 60%; and its share in total energy consumption will increase to about 20%.

In the first half of 2025, affected by Sino-US trade policies and customs inspection and quarantine policies, the Group's grain and oil enterprise customers all experienced production reduction. Faced with unfavorable situations, the Group actively responded, maintained communication with customers, kept abreast of the production situation of steam users, and reasonably arranged inspection and suspension plans for electricity and thermal equipment and facilities.
